CLEANING UP PASTURES.

Willard Hanson, state food and dairy commissioner, returned Saturday from Provo, where he went to inspect the dairies and pastures in that locality. In making his report, he said that the dairies were much improved over a year ago, but that he was not satisfied with the conditions and demanded that many improvements be made. He visited the pastures which Dr. A. C. Young, state veterinarian, inspected and expressed his opinion that they were unsanitary. A stream passes through several pastures which carries sewerage, but he learned that none of the milk produced in those pastures was offered for sale. When Dr. Young visited Provo about three weeks ago he found some alarming conditions and ordered a general clean-up. This work is being carried on now as fast as possible.
